REESE WITHERSPOON

NOW one of Hollywood's top actresses, Reese Witherspoon's turn in Walk The Line has already bagged her a Golden Globe and made her a hot fave for an Oscar next month. But it seems some moviegoers have noticed the 29-year-old appears a tad expressionless in the forehead department, so is there something Reese isn't telling us? Here's what the experts reckon.

FIRSTLY, we should congratulate her on her skin. She is a phototype I who normally burns quite easily but she has no signs of sun damage.

It is hard to tell from the photographs if she has had muscle relaxant injections to her forehead. However, here at the City Skinklinic we find that people with similar bone structure and high rounded cheekbones (which can be created with a permanent injectable filler) like hers have fewer lines to the upper third of their face.

In order to maintain the quality of her skin, she is probably using a high SPF daily as well as regular collagen boosting treatments such as IPL photorejuvenation.

Mesotherapy is also an excellent anti-ageing treatment for younger skin. This is becoming more and more popular in UK as it is customised to the person.

JUDGING from these photographs, it doesn't look as though Reese has had any work done on either face or body.

My guess would be that she has natural good looks which are enhanced by make-up.

She obviously has very good genes and as such is ageing well.

She probably has regular facials and skin treatments to keep her looking her best but I don't think she has had any non-surgical treatments.

Her skin is beautiful and she probably stays out of the sun. Still, she is only 29 so she shouldn't have many wrinkles – if she's been sensible, anyway.

Her slim figure probably also requires extensive exercise and sensible diet. But she has had two children so she probably spends a lot of time running around after them!

CELEBRITY SURGERY SPY

DUNCAN JAMES

THE countdown is on for the release of ex-Blue boy Duncan James's debut solo offering next month.

After months of recording in LA Dunc – showbiz age 27 but often rumoured to be older – is looking refreshed and glowing despite being dad to 14-month-old daughter Tianie-Finn.

So what's his secret? Here's what our experts reckon.

CELEBRITY SURGERY SPY

TERI HATCHER

SHE once played Superman's sidekick Lois Lane, so maybe her youthful looks are down to a healthy serving of kryptonite.

You can't deny the Desperate Housewives beauty looks fantastic at 41. Teri has admitted having Botox, but insists wrinkles are good.

"I haven't had anything done to my face in over a year," she says. "And I don't plan to."

WHAT a difference! Her smooth, wrinkle free forehead would indicate the use of muscle relaxant injections. Her eyebrows are completely different.

They are now well defined and shaped with no straggly hairs. This can be achieved with a combination of electrolysis and permanent make-up to enhance the shape.

Her chiselled features can be due in some part to her weight loss. However, in the previous picture, she has jowls and a much fuller face.

TERI does appear to have had a few non-surgical procedures. I would say she uses dermal fillers such as restylane or perlane. She also has very white teeth which can be obtained by teeth whitening treatment.

Hard to tell if he has had anything done – he is almost the same in both pictures.

He has fabulously smooth, even-toned skin so he perhaps has microdermabrasion treatments or skin peels.

He may have some Botox and non-surgical fillers to stop lines and wrinkles.

He shows signs of environmental damage as well as flushing across his nose and cheeks.

This can easily be treated with a course of Intense Pulsed Light.

I do not feel he has had any procedures but he almost certainly has regular facials.
