

COMBINATION APPROACH TO TREATING THE EYE AREA

With Frances Furlong

There are many characteristics that make eyes more beautiful. Some being natural as we are born with, others may be applied. Among the most obvious natural features are the shape and size of the eyes. Eyes can be anything from near slits, to elongated, almond shaped, rounded, sleepy, puffy, amongst other shapes and also vary in size. At times it is not so much the eye size but more of their size in relation to the face. After that we get all the exquisite possible eye colours, then the length of your eyelashes, the shape and skin tone of your facial eye sockets and finally the shape, size, and curvature of your eyebrows. Which of all these possible combinations are considered more beautiful largely depends on country, culture and fashion.

Common eye problems and possible treatment options

1. Small eyes due to heavy brow - trying to open up the eye area can be achieved with the use of well placed toxins into specific muscles. Furthermore dermal filler such as Restylane can be placed in the brow, temple and lateral forehead to give a non surgical brow lift, results typically last 6-12 months. Prices range from £175 to £600.

2. Heavy upper eyelids and excessive skin - typically this becomes more of an issue as we age, however for some, heavy eyelids is a hereditary feature. In some clients surgical intervention is the best option, often when non surgical treatments have been exhausted or are no longer as effective. In recent times though Plexr Plasma soft surgery has become a popular choice for the right candidate, it is a minor non invasive procedure with roughly a week's downtime. Treatments typically cost £500, clients normally require two sessions, 3 months apart and last 18 months to 2 years.

3. Dynamic horizontal lines around the eyes and vertical deep lines to the frown - These issues are caused by the overuse of muscles to the eye area and frowning. There are not necessarily caused by the ageing process, but rather stronger muscle and lifestyle habits. Staring at computer screens and phones cause our eye muscles to be used more. Also frowning due to thinking, expressing displeasure and as a way of shielding our eyes from strong bright lights are all factors. For some individuals toxins work perfectly, others are better with a light dermal filler, some individuals need a combination of both due to severity of the wrinkles in question. Prices start from £175 - £300. ■
